

On behalf of my colleagues and the Board of Directors of Exelon Corporation, I want to express how pleased we are to sponsor Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs at The Field Museum in Chicago.

Exelon is proud to be a part of this unique exhibition that opens the doors to an astonishing leader of the Golden Age. This exhibition promotes the conservation and preservation of the historical legacy of King Tut through innovative technology. Visitors will see and hear about the fascinating times in which the young king lived and learn how his short reign changed history.

The Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs exhibition includes more than 120 priceless treasures from the tomb of Tutankhamun and other royal tombs, all between 3,000 and 3,500 years old. Visitors of the exhibition will learn about the extraordinary leader and the lives of ancient Egyptians through treasures and artifacts from the Valley of the Kings historical sites and other royal graves from the 18th dynasty. In this national museum tour, more than 50 major artifacts excavated from King Tut's tomb will be on display, including his royal diadem (crown) and one of the gold and inlaid canopic coffinettes that contained his mummified internal organs.

A similar exhibition appeared at The Field Museum almost thirty years ago and drew more than one million visitors. Now, a new generation will be able to share in one of the world's greatest legacies.

Exelon strongly believes in giving back to the community through supporting educational experiences. One of Exelon's goals is to make Chicago a better place to live and visit. We think sponsoring this exhibition in our town does just that.

Exelon encourages everyone to take advantage of all that The Field Museum and the City of Chicago have to offer Chicago residents and guests. Enjoy Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs along with all the other wonderful sights and sounds of Chicago.
